

FREE REIN.

Schley and His Counsel Willing to Answer All Questions.

The Admiral Will Visit West and South When Inquiry Is Over.

Washington, Oct. 30.—(Spl.)—Attorney Reaney is giving Capt. Lemley, the judge advocate, at the Court of Inquiry, a free reign in the cross examination of Rear Admiral Schley. For two days, occupying eight working hours of the court, the Admiral has been under a fire of questions, interrupted by only two objections from his counsel, these upon minor points, and one of which was withdrawn later. In thus allowing the judge advocate practically unlimited scope in the cross examination, Mr. Reaney places himself and his client in the position of being able to say to the judges: "We have nothing to conceal. We are only too glad to answer any and all questions touching our conduct in the Santiago campaign. We asked for a full investigation and are pleased it is being accorded us."

When the court adjourned yesterday afternoon the judge advocate had just reached the reconnaissance of May 31 against the Colon and the shore batteries. He had yet to cross examine Admiral Schley upon this event and upon the battle of July 3. As he left the court room Lemley remarked to his clerk: "Well, bundle up the unexpended ammunition." He was referring to the long list of type-written questions from which he had been reading during the past two days.

Admiral Schley will make a western and probably a southern tour after the close of the investigation. Several days ago he accepted an invitation to attend a banquet in his honor to be given by the Hamilton club of Chicago, though the date was left for further decision. Publication of that fact at once brought him a cordial invitation to visit Louisville. He has answered that if he should go to Chicago he will also visit Louisville. Now that it is settled that he is going west there will be invitations from other cities and the probability is that he will make a long tour.

New York, Oct. 30.—Miss Edythe Patten, bride-to-be of Major General Henry C. Corbin, of the United States army, has arrived, with her three sisters, from Southampton, on the American liner, St. Paul. They were met at Quarantine by General Corbin and transferred to the Quarantine tug Governor Flower, which raced to the Pennsylvania depot in time to catch the noon train for Washington.

General Corbin was the guest of Dr. Alvah H. Doty, the Health Officer at Quarantine. On learning his wish to catch the noon train Dr. Doty placed the Governor Flower at the General's disposal. The tug, with General Corbin and a Customs Inspector on board, ran alongside the mailsteamer Postmaster, as the latter swung alongside the liner, which slowed down off station at 9:40 a. m.

Dr. Doty also asked Captain Jamison if he would permit the Pattens to be transferred. The captain gallantly consented.

General Corbin met his fiancée on the promenade deck. There was little time for greetings. The mail was being rapidly swung aboard the Postmaster. Her high deck afforded the chance to leave the St. Paul from the latter's spar deck, and the four Misses Patten walked across a short gang plank to the upper deck of the Post-

Their love story is romantic. Mrs. Fox was an ardent student of art and of sculpture especially. In Cleveland she met Louis Fox, an actor of the vaudeville stage and they were married. That was seven years ago, and she and her husband have not lived together for a long time. While in Italy with her mother last year, Mrs. Fox met a young Italian at the place in which she lived. He was ambitious to come to America, but was without money. Admiring his enthusiasm for her home country, Mrs. Fox not only paid his passage to New York but brought him to Uniontown and secured employment for him on the Canton-

FOR THE FIRST TIME A MARRIED WOMAN CHRISTENS NAVAL VESSEL.

The Young Matron Who Christened Chauncey.

Philadelphia, Oct. 30.—The secret marriage of Mrs. Mae Chauncey Todd, chosen a month ago to christen the new torpedo boat Chauncey, was disclosed when the boat slid down the ways. The Chauncey was named in honor of Mrs. Todd's great-grandfather, Commodore Isaac Chauncey, one of the famous naval officers of the War of 1812.

Mrs. Todd, who was Miss Mae Chauncey Stevens, was chosen a month ago to christen the vessel, and when the Secretary of the Navy learned of her marriage, despite the unwritten law that only a maid shall act as sponsor for a United States ship, he refused to disarrange the plans.

Thus it was that Mrs. Todd earned the distinction of being the first married woman to christen a naval vessel. The fact that she twice failed to break the bottle of champagne on the bows of the boat and had to try a third time was regarded for a moment as an ill-collision on the West Shore road a few miles east of here this morning, between freight and passenger trains, wrecked ten freight cars and dangerously injured Engineer Harrison of the passenger train. Twenty passengers were badly shaken, but none were fatally injured.
